

THAT MAKES CENTS

Teaching children about money when they're young helps them understand how it works. Many parents wonder how they can teach kids about money. As part of Great Midwest Bank's Financial Education For Kids series, we've created this activity page to help your child identify money.

Tips on how to teach saving habits at ages 7-10

Kids at this age like to make their own decisions. Now is your opportunity to put that to good use.

- Have your child pick a small item (toy or candy) they want to buy
- Ask your child how much it might cost to buy
- Use different combinations of coins and bills to reach the price of the item
- Encourage your child to save that amount before buying it
